

ASSISTANT PROFESSOR OF HEALTH SCIENCE

RESPONSIBILITIES AND QUALIFICATIONS

University of the Ozarks invites applications for a current opening as a tenure track Assistant Professor of Health Science beginning July 2019. Candidates should be ABD or have earned a Ph.D. degree in Health Science, Public Health, or a related discipline. The desired applicant would have the ability to work as part of a team to promote our growing health science program. The primary responsibilities of this new position include the teaching of courses with a focus on health promotion. Candidates with the ability to teach some or all of the following will be given preference: health education, nutrition, and epidemiology. We expect the candidate's expertise will enhance the Health Science program's curriculum. With teaching as the foremost priority, there is still encouragement and opportunity to conduct undergraduate research with our motivated students.

University of the Ozarks values personal attention and collegiality, thus a familiarity with and understanding of a small and residential campus are highly desirable. A sincere interest in students, excellent communication skills, and support of the University's mission are also required.

Ranked in the top ten of southern region comprehensive baccalaureate institutions by U. S. News & World Report, the University of the Ozarks is a Presbyterian-related institution that blends the liberal arts and professional preparation in a student-centered environment emphasizing quality teaching and student learning. The University serves a diverse group of approximately 850 students from the United States and abroad on a beautiful campus in Clarksville, Arkansas, located along I-40 approximately 90 miles northwest of Little Rock, nestled between the Arkansas River and the Ozark Mountains. Recent major gifts have enhanced the academic program and other campus initiatives. For more information about the University of the Ozarks, visit www.ozarks.edu.
