

VISITING PROFESSOR OF PSYCHOLOGY

RESPONSIBILITIES AND QUALIFICATIONS

The University of the Ozarks invites applications for a current opening as a visiting, non-tenure track Assistant Professor of Psychology beginning July, 2019. This position has the possibility of a future tenure-track option for the right match. Preference will be given to those candidates that have earned a Ph.D. degree in Developmental Psychology by the time of employment, although ABD and expertise in other areas of psychology will be considered. The desired applicant should have previous teaching experience and the ability to work as part of a team to promote our growing psychology program. The primary responsibilities of this new position include the teaching of psychology courses in a range of content areas and enhancing the Psychology program's curriculum.

The University of the Ozarks values personal attention and collegiality, thus a familiarity with and understanding of a small and residential campus are highly desirable. A sincere interest in students, excellent communication skills, and support of the University's mission are also required.

Ranked in the top ten of southern region comprehensive baccalaureate institutions by U. S. News & World Report, the University of the Ozarks is a Presbyterian-related institution that blends the liberal arts and professional preparation in a student-centered environment emphasizing quality teaching and student learning. The University serves a diverse group of approximately 875 students from the United States and abroad on a beautiful campus in Clarksville, Arkansas, located along I-40 approximately 90 miles northwest of Little Rock, nestled between the Arkansas River and the Ozark Mountains. Recent major gifts have enhanced the academic program and other campus initiatives. For more information about the University of the Ozarks, visit www.ozarks.edu.
